Help, when it matters.

International Water Aid Organization e.V.

International Water Aid Organization (IWAO) is a non-profit aid organization registered in Heidelberg. We provide drinking water immediately after catastrophes.

We help! – Emergency Water Supply

The primary mission of IWAO is to quickly and efficiently provide drinking water to people after a catastrophe. IWAO helps to prevent people from drinking contaminated water and thereby avoiding the risk of infection during the first days of a catastrophe. We aim to provide sanitation measures and ultra-filters directly in areas of catastrophe and crisis. IWAO takes charge of all logistics around the transport and implementation of these materials into the emergency area, as import and custom regulations very often impede a rapid short-term on-site mission. We join forces with many experienced aid organizations, who have already been active for some time in countries that are particularly often plagued by catastrophes.

We do Research and Development! – Method Development

After catastrophes, such as earthquakes, hurricanes, floods and tsunamis, infrastructure is often completely and broadly devastated, in which water supply as well as energy supply breaks down. In these cases, IWAO develops technical, mechanical and chemical methods for emergency water treatment, which is completely independent of a power network or any external fuel supply. Currently, IWAO is developing an Emergency-Water-Case that enables smaller groups of people to autonomously produce drinking water from contaminated raw water for several days.

We Consult and Train! – Consulting and Exchange

IWAO consolidates specific expert scientific knowledge and practice to promote a network of water specialists. IWAO extends their expertise to consult a wide range of aid organizations involved in the problematic of potable water supply.
